

Abstract of the Disclosure

A system and method for indicating the service status of serviceable elements of a subassembly stores the service status in a memory using a host controller. When the 5 subassembly is removed from the host controller, the memory may be accessed using a second circuit and separate power supply, and indicators may be illuminated to indicate the service status of the elements.